Excerpt: . . . CHAPTER XI A STANBURY ITINERARY THE SLADEN VALLEY Near to the place where the Sladen Beck and the Stanbury Beck meet there was a mill named Hollings Mill. It is now razed to the ground, the mill chimney and the mill dam only remaining. This mill was best known by the name of Lister Mill, receiving its name from a manufacturer who once ran it. He, sad to tell, unable to succeed according to his wishes, hanged himself. He lived in a house which stood near the mill, and both he and his family worked in the mill. So many accidents and fires occurred here that people used to say the mill was haunted. The writer remembers it being burned down three times. For a time it was used as a cotton mill, and later as a worsted mill. Hollings Mill was built by Mr. Michael Cousins. He ran it for some years and then it passed into the hands of Mr. Thomas Lister. After that Mr. James Thomas, of Balcony, Haworth, bought it for his son William, and he occupied it for a time and then let it after some time to Mr. William Turner, who afterwards purchased it. It was soon after burnt down. Mr. Timothy Feather re-built the mill, but it was burnt down again. Then Messrs. Turner bought it again, but sold it to Messrs. Crabtree Brothers and Sugden. After some time it was burnt down again. Several parties tried...
