Verse 4 gives his definite and personal aim, concluding with a word still further confirming the certainty of the matters in hand. Among the incidental gains of this opening sentence, we note the information that narratives of the Life of Christ were common among His early followers. Such incidental indications must be carefully observed. The student will do well to write out, in full, sentences asserting or involving important doctrines, putting each clause on a separate line, and thus concentrating attention on each one successively. This careful writing out of the words of the Bible is specially helpful to preachers, and will frequently suggest suitable divisions of an expository sermon. More difficult than the grammatical analysis of sentences is the task of tracing the writer s Line Of Thought, of grasping the ideas which he endeavours to put successively before his readers and thus following...
