Whole provinces have often been surveyed and mapped by measuring a single line, and taking angles with a proper instrument, such as the theodolite. Let AB be a base known by exact measurement. If the an-p--t. gles PAB and PBA are observed, which can be easily done if P be visible, whatever be its distance, from the points A and B, the triangle APB is known, as in case 3 of oblique triangles. Thus the lengths AP and PB and the angle between them are known by calculation, and the position of P can be fixed on the map or plan. If the point Q can be observed from any two angles of the triangle APB, Q is found in like manner with P: or if Q be visible only from P, not from A or B, and if PQ is a line known either by measurement, or as may easily happen, from calculation of some triangle of which it is one side, the angle BPQ can be observed, and QB is found as in Case 2, as well as the angles PQ. B and PBQ. 40. You can write the expression for the area of a triangle, if either ab and c are given, or ab and C, as in Q32, for it is Sine Cang half ba; or putting A for area, A f ab Sin C ica Sin B bc Sin A. You can write it also...
