Excerpt: . . . and over-run in weight of castings, it is necessary to add a percentage to the net calculated weight varying from 5 percent in the case of large castings to 10 percent in the case of small pieces with numerous fillets. Table VIII. --Unit Weights of Substances most commonly used in Machinery Estimating Detail Sheets In Fig. 83 is given an example of a convenient form of sheet for recording the details of an estimate. Its use practically compels a certain amount of system in taking off the quantities; so that all plates, all loam castings, etc. , will be listed together and cost computed at the proper rate. By preparing the material-estimate in this methodical manner, and by checking-off each piece as listed by a red mark on the print, no serious omissions of items should take place. The same form may be used...
